Tremco Teams Up With Air Barrier Association of America (ABAA)

Many architects are adopting the Air Barrier Association of America (ABAA) Quality Assurance Program, which requires contractors who apply air barriers to be accredited by ABAA. Part of becoming an accredited contractor is employing Level 3 Certified Installers. However, for many air barrier installers, getting trained may require extra expense for travel and lost time from the jobsite.

Tremco has teamed up with ABAA to bring Level 3 Certified Air Barrier Installer Training classes closer to the contractor. So far, classes have been held in Chicago, Dallas and Los Angeles, and Tremco has received an overwhelming response. Many installers in these cities have obtained their air barrier installer certification while saving money in travel costs and saving time away from the job.

This new training initiative aligns well with the following Tremco Cornerstone Principles:

- Our customers' success is our success,
- Doing business with us should be easy, and
- We must generate consistently superior results.

For their extraordinary efforts to carry out Tremco's Cornerstone Principles, Tremco Technical Service representatives and Marketing staff responsible for both the idea and implementation of the Tremco-sponsored ABAA Certification Training Program earned a special Tremco Commercial Sealants & Waterproofing Cornerstone recognition award. The team was nominated and selected by their Tremco peers.
